Karina Finegan

Karina Finegan is in the process of a career transition into full stack web development. She requires an online CV that will make her stand out as a viable candidate for employment opportunities in that field.

- GOAL -

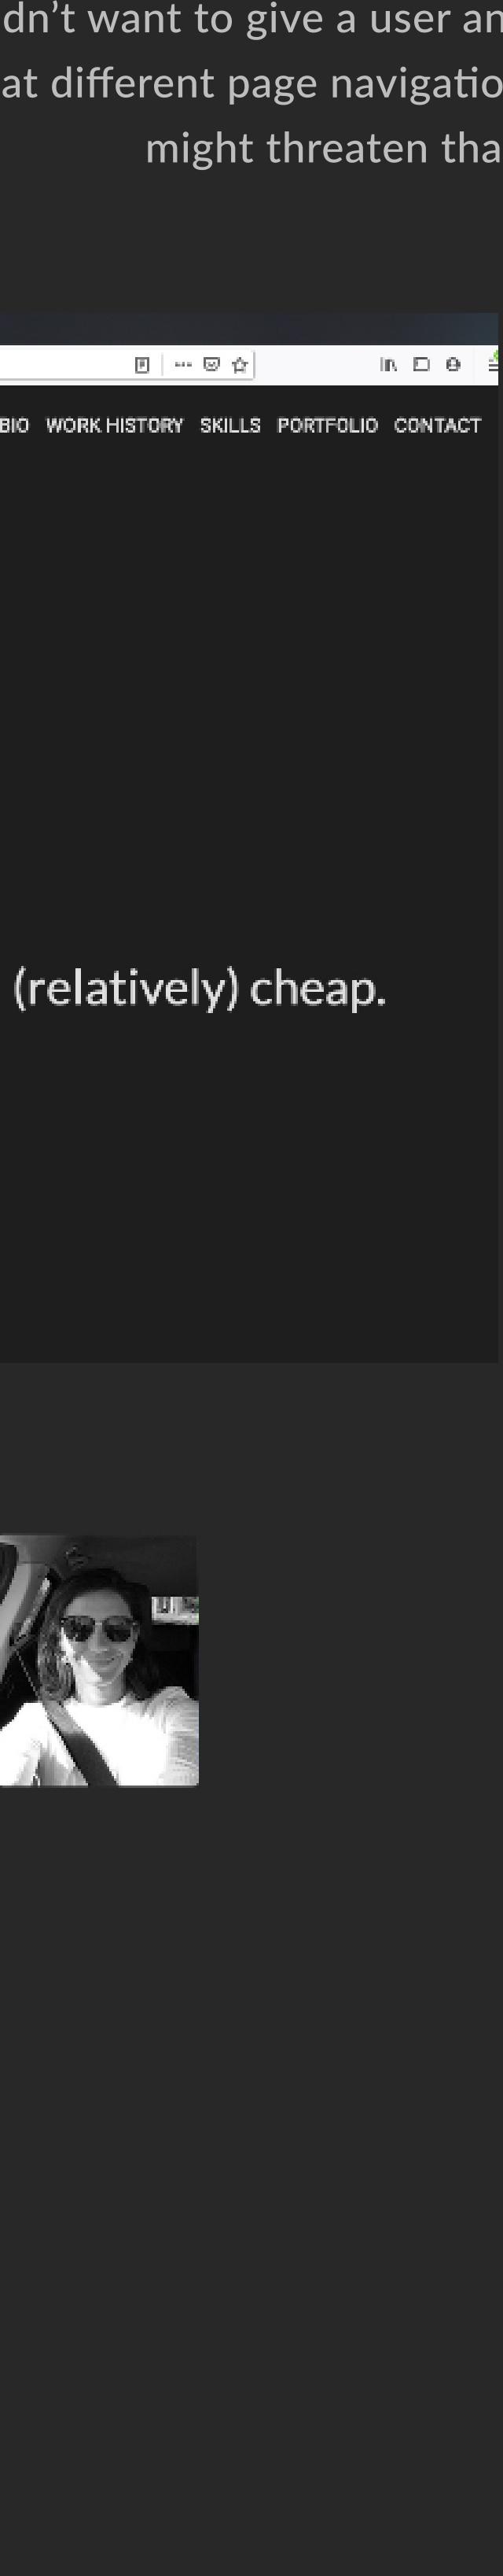

To create a website to showcase my work history, my skills and to act as a first introduction for potential employers.

- FEATURES -

Landing Page, interactive work history timeline, skills page and a portfolio of selected projects. Eventually the portfolio page will be dynamic.

- MY ROLE -

Creative concept, copywriting, UX, photography, editing, design, SEO & technology.

- THE HOMEPAGE -

I decided on a long scroll homepage as although there are different sections to the information, it is all on the one subject. Therefore I felt that the least amount of flow interruption possible would enhance the UX. The idea is to read this website, as you might a traditional CV. I didn't want to give a user any reason to lose interest or click away, and I feel that different page navigation might threaten that.

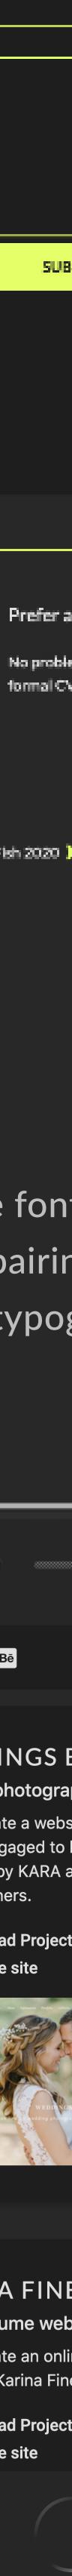

Personal Bio.

I love all aspects of web development and I've been tinkering with HTML & CSS for a while now, before I started Full Stack development I was mainly focused on my career in photography business and I've found those design skills to be invaluable when planning and presenting this website. I initially discovered an interest in web development when I taught myself basic CSS in order to alter something on my photography business website. I was surprised then, at how creatively and intellectually engaging web development really is. I've listed some of my professional skills below, but a more complete outline can be found in my traditional CV, which is downloadable from the link in the footer of this website.
